

Mission Statement

IUPUI Psychology Advising Office

The mission of the IUPUI Psychology Advising Office (PAO) is to enable psychology majors to develop the competence, autonomy, and purpose necessary to set coherent directions for their lives both during and after their formal education. The PAO accomplishes this mission by:

- teaching students about university, school, and department requirements, policies, procedures, and opportunities;
- scheduling appointments for students to meet with their faculty advisors;
- providing resources to help students make current and future decisions;
- offering assistance with the university's electronic advising systems;
- serving as a secure and confidential repository for students' academic records; and
- referring students to other campus offices and resources.

In order for these strategies to be successful, the PAO assumes that students are mature enough to ask for advice when they need it and responsible enough to act upon this advice when they receive it. The PAO is committed to offering a broad array of services created to enable IUPUI's diverse population of psychology majors and minors to accomplish their educational goals, actualize their post-baccalaureate aspirations, and develop an appreciation for the academic community to which they belong.
